Edit: How does one decide whether or not a function is regular? I was thinking about this question this morning: Let $h(x)$ and $k(x)$ be real valued functions defined on the real line \mathbb{R} such that $\begin{cases} h(x) = h(x+1) \\ k(x) = k(x+k) \end{cases}$ for every $x \in \mathbb{R}$. What is the relation between $h(x)$ and $k(x)$? This question occurs when I was learning about ordinary differential equations, and I actually don't understand what a proper time function is. I tried to google about proper time functions, but I only found something about numerical analysis. Does anyone know what a proper time function is and why is it important? A: I know this is a late reply but I wanted to point out some of the different types of time functions that are used in dynamics. The two that are most often used are: time defined as the absolute value of the velocity of the particle time defined as the norm of the velocity of the particle The first definition is more useful in the simple case where the velocity function is an observable and the second definition is most useful in more complicated cases where the velocity function is not an observable (i.e. the velocity is not directly measurable). I hope this helps. A: I understand that you are asking about proper time functions. I did not find an accepted definition on the web. Here is my definition: A proper time function is a function $T(x)$ defined on the real line, that satisfies $T(x+1) = T(x)$ and $T(x) = T(x+k)$ for all $x \in \mathbb{R}$. The "proper" part of this is due to the fact that, in general, $T(x)$ can differ from $T(x+h)$ for all $h > 0$. e79caf774b

Is there a db4o version of google app engine that doesn't involve using the xml format or custom file-based indexes, but uses an in-memory database instead? A: I am afraid there is no such repository. Indexing by SQL does not mean that it is using a database any more. The only solution that comes to my mind is finding a way to use an in-memory database, or perhaps to move away from Java/Scala to use another language. Here, either the app engine library itself or the db4o server will be enough. { "kind": "FUNCTION_DEFINITION", "hasDiagnostics": true, "children": [{ "kind": "LIST", "children": [] }, { "kind": "LIST", "hasDiagnostics": true, "children": [{ "kind": "FUNCTION_KEYWORD", "trailingMinutiae": [{
